THE TEARSHEET BUSINESS OF HOME

It's a new year, and with it comes a fresh crop of trends that I'm already obsessing over. If last year's looks were all about crafting more purposeful—and environmentally conscious—interiors, the latest launches suggest that designers are beginning to think outside the box about bringing a touch of the great outdoors into a home without sacrificing comfort or creativity.

Take, for example, Jiun Ho's new Nagomi collection. The designer drew inspiration from the flowers and vegetables growing in his backyard garden in Sonoma County, and features eight finely woven fabrics including an embroidered linen adorned in an intricately stitched tree motif. Or consider the Perspective series from Innovations, which spans six painterly wallcoverings based on natural landscapes, such as a mountaintop-themed mural and a waterfall-style design adorned in cascading brushstrokes. Both debuts are every bit as elegant as they are ethereal, and you can read more about them in today's Product Preview.

Plus, don't miss our Meet the Maker's profile on North Carolina chairmaker extraordinaire Brian Boggs, or six buttery smooth, leather-upholstered pieces sure to stand the test of time.

Enjoy!

2024 has arrived, and with it comes an array of fresh launches to keep us inspired while we count down the days to Maison&Objet and Déco Off, which kick off in Paris later this month. From fringe-lined sofas to shimmery mountainscape murals, here are some highlights from the latest round of releases.

Jiun Ho's Nagomi collection is a love letter to garden botanicals. The series features eight finely woven textiles inspired by the flowers and vegetables growing in the designer's Sonoma County backyard, including the double-layered Ikebana and an embroidered linen adorned in an intricately stitched tree motif named Daisugi.
