

what's new

culture CLUB

Global Inspiration Serves
As The Driving Force In Two Innovative Spaces

JIUN HO DE JIA

Travel enthusiast and celebrated interior designer Jiun Ho brings a collection of personal pieces and curated antiques to his new gallery and studio space Jiun Ho de Jia, meaning "The House of Jiun Ho," in Chinese. Dubbed an educational and culturally transformative space by the designer, Jiun intends to bring his love of global art to his San Francisco gallery. The 11,000 square-foot warehouse will feature three spaces for rotating artwork from artists around the world, as well as pieces from Jiun's personal collection. Jiun added a state of the art kitchen with a beer and wine bar to be used for entertaining and special events. The versatile space will also serve as Jiun's studio for his interior design business.

Jiun Ho de Jia is located at 1180 Folsom Street in San Francisco. 415.437.2284 | www.jiunho.com

DE-COR

The globally inspired interior of De-Cor celebrates the unique furniture, artifacts, and textiles collected by owner Deepali Pareek. The newly designed 7,500 square-foot gallery style showroom located in Pasadena features hand-selected items from Pareek's travels to Western India. When recreating the warehouse space, Pareek was inspired by the interesting details of the building's interior and utilized the natural lighting, original wooden beams and brick structure. Visitors of this visually stimulating store are sure to be dazzled by the array of colorful merchandise: from embroidered pillows to decorated ottomans to bright fabrics. The thoughtfully designed Textiles Room houses the gallery's constantly changing selection of fabrics and smaller-sized housewares. Among her many treasures and found objects from around the world, Pareek also showcases her own furniture and pillow designs. Color and texture are used throughout the expansive showroom to meld the ancient with the contemporary and to provide shoppers with a truly enlightening experience.

De-Cor is located at 30 South San Gabriel Boulevard in Pasadena. 626.405.0897 | www.de-cor.com

—Natalie Way

